When I was a lad, my father used to send me out to the fields each day to watch over his sheep. It was boring work for a lad. I longed to be running around with my friends or playing ball.

“Can’t the sheep look after themselves?” I asked my father.

Father said, “It was important work. You must keep your eyes peeled for the wolf.”

Then I thought: “Let’s liven things up a bit. Let’s play a trick on the villagers.”

So I got up and ran as fast as I could into the village shouting at the top of my voice: “Wolf! Wolf! WOOOOOOOLF!”

The villagers grabbed sticks and came running up to the field to chase away the wolf. But when they got there, all was peaceful.

I laughed: “Ha ha! Fooled you all!”
