When I was a young boy, my father used to ask me to watch over his sheep every day. It was boring work for me. I wanted to be running around or playing ball with my friends.

“Dad, can’t the sheep look after themselves?” I asked.

Father said, “Of course not! You must watch out for the wolf.”

One day, I thought, “Looking after the sheep is such a boring thing. There are no wolves. Let me play a trick on the villagers.”

So I ran as fast as I could into the village, shouting at the top of my voice: “Wolf! Wolf! WOOOOOOOOOLF!”

The villagers grabbed sticks and came running up to the field to chase away the wolf. But when they got there, all was peaceful.

I laughed, “Ha ha! Fooled you all! Thanks for your help.”
