Dear Ms. Peng,

I'm sorry to tell you that my son, Brian, cannot go to school because of an accident. He broke his leg while going biking with Andrew and Peter, two boys in our community. The doctor estimated that it would possibly take eight weeks to heal, during which Brian will be absent from school. He needs to keep his studies at home. Luckily, his classmate Eric, who doesn't live very far from us, promises to pick up his homework every day. Brian will attend school after he recovers.

Sincerely yours,
Julia Huang

NOTICE

Do you want to lend a helping hand to those who are less lucky than you?
Here is a good chance for you!

As usual, we are going to hold a charity auction in July. Students are encouraged to bring their books, CDs, new stationery or home-made cookies to the office for this event. Stuffed toys are not welcome for fear of spreading germs. Half of the money collected in this three-day charity event will be donated to orphanages in Tainan, and the other half will go to the city daycare center for the old people. Students who donate the most items for the auction will be given a prize. So get home to clean out what you don't need and see if you can help them.

Small as a peanut,
Big as a giant,
We're all the same size
When we turn off the light.
Rich as a sultan,
Poor as a mite,
We're all the same
When we turn off the light.
Red, black or orange,
Yellow or white,
We all look the same
When we turn off the light.
So maybe the way
To make everything right
Is for God to just reach out
And turn off the light!

Chris had a bad day yesterday. After his business trips in Paris and New York, he was going on vacation. Sadly, it was a nightmare. He left his house in London early in the morning and took a bus to the airport.

When he was asked for his passport, Chris became very nervous. He didn't have it with him. In a minute, he jumped into a taxi. The driver drove quickly and sent Chris home in twenty minutes.

He ran into the house, found his passport on the bedside table and left the house again. But the taxi wasn't there! Chris jumped up and down angrily. "I can't believe it. The taxi left!" He shouted and ran down the street to look for another taxi. After twenty minutes, he found one.

Unfortunately, the traffic on the roads was terrible and it took him forty minutes to get back to the airport. When he finally arrived, his plane had left for Tokyo at 11:30. He was very sad and the airline promised to get him a seat on an evening flight. Then Chris went home in another taxi to wait.

Today, people “google it” to find the information they need on the Internet. The search engine Google is used so often that the word “google” was added to the dictionary in 2006. In fact, about two-thirds of computer users today use Google. Googling something has become a way of life and the person who changes the way people look things up is Larry Page.

Larry Page was born in America in 1973. His parents were both computer scientists. From an early age Page has been interested in finding out how machines work, but invention is what interests him the most. Page and his friend, Sergey Brin, began the google page while they were still college students in 1996. They had the dream to make everyone get information easily. At that time, there were already several search engines, but they believed that they could create something better. In 1998, they started a company, Google, in a friend’s garage. The name Google comes from the word “googol,” which is a 1 with 100 zeros after it. Larry and his friend used this name because they hoped the company could organize a lot of information online. They made it! Today, Google is very popular because it is fast and easy to use.
