The Hsuehshan Tunnel, or "Snow Mountain" tunnel, is a 12.9 km-long tunnel, the longest in Taiwan and the fifth longest in the world. It opened on June 16, 2006. The tunnel went through the Hsuehshan Range, joining Taipei city with Ilan. It cut down the traveling time between these two places from two hours to just half an hour.

But the construction was not an easy job. When digging the tunnel, engineers had problems dealing with fractured rocks and much water under the ground coming out. Therefore, serious collapses happened very often during construction. The construction began in July in 1991 and 25 workers died during the construction.

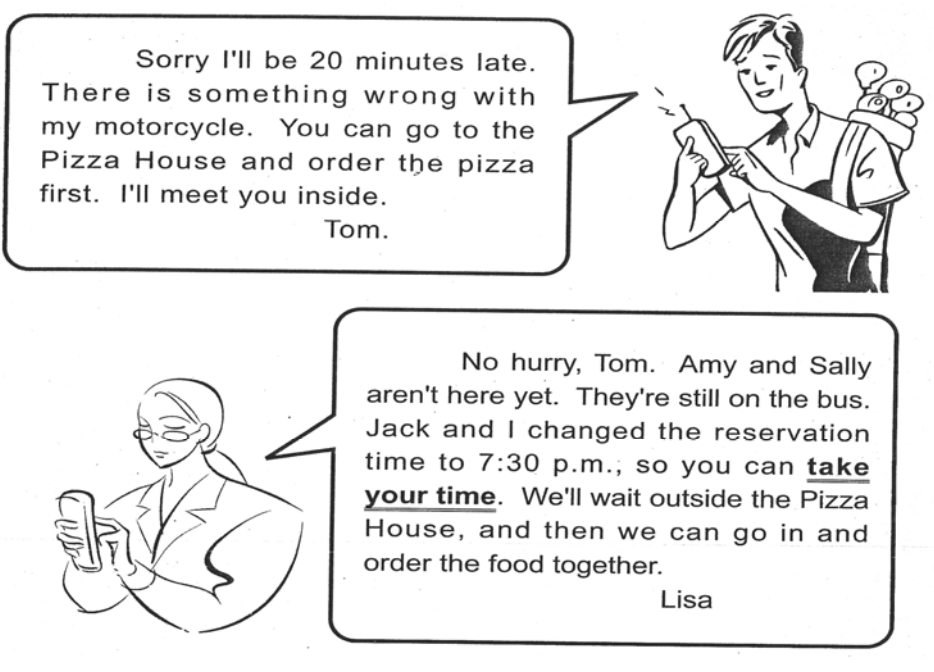

Next time when you drive through the Hsuehshan Tunnel, be thankful for those who worked hard and even paid their lives to make this tunnel.

All of us will go and pick you up at the airport except Dad. He can't because of an important business meeting that day, but he will come back and take us to a big dinner in the evening.
